

Speaking on a cellular telephone requires a louder voice than is required in normal, polite conversation while in crowded places surrounded by strangers. On an airplane, there is no option for moving away from loud conversations if they are distracting. I am against any regulation that would allow cellular phone use while in flight.